DISTURBIA: SCREAMS IN THE PARK IN ROSEMONT COMBINES THE THRILLS OF TWO HAUNTED HOUSES INTO ONE TERRIFYING AND INTERACTIVE EXPERIENCE THIS OCTOBER

Haunt Features 20,000 Square Feet of Terror With More Than 35 Rooms Where Guests' Determine Their Fate

ROSEMONT, Ill. – Only the bravest should dare to enter Disturbia: Screams in the Park in Rosemont when it opens in the basement level of the parking garage at MB Financial Park at Rosemont (5501 Park Place) on Friday, Oct. 3 from 7 p.m. to 12 a.m. There are terrors every step of the way in this immersive haunted house experience, where guests become part of an interactive world of horror, complete with an industry-unique entry that sucks guests into the haunt—whether they are ready or not. Disturbia: Screams in the Park will remain open through Saturday, Nov. 1. Tickets go on sale Friday, August 15.

Disturbia: Screams in the Park is a product of Joseph and Mike Pantano, who previously ran Disturbia Torment of Fears in Addison, Ill., which was voted number one in Haunted House Chicago's 2009 and 2010 Patron's Choice Awards. The brothers brought the highly interactive nature and high quality sets of Disturbia to Rosemont's Screams in the Park to create the ultimate horror experience—Disturbia: Screams in the Park. The haunts at Disturbia: Screams in the Park progressively grow to be deeper and darker, leaving its guests in the Pits of Hell by the time they exit the haunt.

Even past visitors of Screams in the Park will find their fortitude tested as they traverse the possessed and unpredictable halls of pure evil at Disturbia: Screams in the Park. The 2014 haunted house features new sets and a remodeled floor plan, in addition to brand new characters and scares that are sure to place guests in an unescapable real-life nightmare.
